Density: The new plan fails to take into account densities which are appropriate in small rural Oxfordshire villages. Planning officers in SODC complain that the government White Paper was obviously designed by people in London with no understanding of issues faced in the shires. These densities reflect the same disconnect between SODC planners and their small smaller rural constituencies. They should be much smaller, and this should be explicit.

Off street parking: There is a similar issue with regard to requirements for offstreet parking in rural areas where bus services are minimal, and car ownership is therefore higher. This local plan should reflect that need for more offstreet Parking provision in these areas.

Highways infrastructure: Given development in recent years, this needs investment. Improvements should be detailed before more permission is granted for development.

Q8. If your comments are more than 500 words long, please use the space below to provide a summary. You are not required to summarise your comments, but a summary would help us in our reporting.
