Reading the modified plan, and the plan for building many new homes in South Oxfordshire, there is no mention of our village and the impact that the additional traffic will have on it. Nuneham Courtenay is one of only two surviving historic villages in England. The houses here are very close to the A4074, which runs through the village, and have no foundations, having been built in the 1760s. There is a major culvert that runs under the road, draining the runoff from local fields and ponds and preventing flooding in the village. There is no pedestrian crossing in the village. The develop of the garden city in Berinsfield and Didcot as well as more homes in Grenoble road and Culham will create more traffic. The new river crossing and Clifton Hampden by pass will link up to the Golden Balls round about. At which time, if people are going to the science park or Oxford or to the park and ride, they will drive through Nuneham Courtenay. A by pass of the village was planned and marked out but never went ahead. As a small historic village, we are totally being ignored. The additional traffic will affect not only the structure of this historic area, the wildlife who live in the woods, the quality of our health due to pollution, it cuts the village in half and makes it nearly impossible to cross the road or get out of our drives.
